About Audrey Remedios: After finishing her veterinary degree, Dr. Audrey Remedios completed a surgical residency and Master of Veterinary Science program at the WCVM. She succesfully passed the certifying examinations to become a surgery specialist both in large and small animals as designated by the American College of Veterinary Surgeons. After 9 years of teaching at WCVM, she moved to Calgary and established the Western Veterinary Specialist Centre. She started and developed the small animal surgery program in the newly established University of Calgary's School of Veterinary Medicine and taught there for 5 years. Today, Dr. Remedios is in private practice in Calgary, where she also provides care for animals from many rescue groups such as the Alberta Spay Neuter Task Force, AARCS and Cochraine. Under the auspices of Veterinarians Without Borders, she is currently helping to develop an animal health program for the Canadian Arctic.
